The Weather Man Made Such Umbrella Bargains

POSSIBLE.

The long-continued fair weather which has prevailed for some weeks has had a depressing effect upon the umbrella manufacturer. On account of these conditions, makers have been very timid about results, and are found willing to take the smallest part of cost for their outputs. We had the good fortune of securing 2,-500 umbrellas at actually less than half the regular market price. It behooves every man and woman in Washington or within reach of these offerings to make the most of them. Every umbrella is new, best in workmanship, and represented in the same line as if you were paying full price, instead of less than half.

A Pile Cure That Goes to the Root of the Disease.

There are lots of lotions, oils, and salves that will, through their soothing influence, relieve temporarily the pain incident to piles. But is that all the sufferer requires? There was another interval of silence, and then the long-suffering Einstein began to say: "You don't need to get mad about it; I am as good as you any day, even if you are boss of the Health Department. Now tell me what you want and I will try to and carry out your orders."

But the Poundkeeper's troubles did not end when he had captured the wandering porker, and had him safely imprisoned at the pound. It then became necessary to provide for the keeping of the animal, and here several difficulties presented themselves. canine species anywhere is fed better than at the pound in the District of Columbia. Moreover, Mr. Einstein is provided with facilities for feeding the carnivorous quadrupeds that have the misfortune to fall for a time under his tender laercies. But when it comes to the feeding of hogs the genial Poundmaster is out of his native element. He does not profess to know just what viands are suitable to a porcine brute in solitary confinement. The fact is Mr. Einstein has no use for a hog anyway, at the dog pound, and he quickly way, at the dog pound, and he quickly came to the conclusion that the best way came to the conclusion that the best way out of the difficulty was to get rid of the hog at the earliest possible moment.

The Schedule Completed and Submitted to the Commissioners. The full schedule of bids recently sub Thirty-three classes of supplies are em-braced in the schedule and the lowest bids on the several classes amounted in the aggregate to $256,941.56. This amount is higher than last year for two reasons, according to the report, first, because of a greater amount of supplies, and, secondly, because of the higher prices for some of them. The report of the committee contains a recommendation that the presen system of requiring a uniform deposit of $20 with each proposal, regardless of the amount involved be changed, on the ground that the totals of various bids vary from $155 to $70,000.

JACOB DE HAVEN'S MONEY

Many Letters Received at the Treasury Department About It.

The Alleged Claim Said to Be a Bogus One Used by Sharpers for the Purpose of Swindling People. A Circular of Warning to the Public Issued by the Authorities.

A large number of letters are received daily at the Treasury Department from people in all parts of the country desiring information regarding the distribution of the money which Jacob De Haven loaned to the Government in 1777. Unscrupulou claim agents have fabricated this story and are sending letters to every person who bears the name of De Haven, saying that the Government received $450,000 from Jacob De Haven, who kept a hotel in Philadelphia, and that this amount, with the interest, has accumulated into an mmense fortune, to which the descendants and heirs of Jacob De Haven are entitled.

The following circular letter has been prepared by Assistant Secretary Taylor, and is being sent by the chief of the Miscellaneous Division, who has charge of the natter, to every person enquiring about this supposed fortune:

"You enquire as to the status of an alleged claim of Jacob De Haven or his heirs for money loaned by him to the United States Government during the Revolution-"In reply, you are informed that this partment has no knowledge of the so-lled 'De Haven claims.' No such claim called 'De Haven claims.' No such claim has ever been presented to the Treasury, either by Jacob De Haven or his heirs, nor do its official records furnish any evidence that the United States Government was ever indebted to Mr. De Haven.

"There is not now, nor ever has been, any money in the Treasury for the heirs of Jacob De Haven. A confidence game, evidently the work of unscrupulous claim agents, has been operated for years among the descendants of Mr. De Haven, and this department has received many letters from persons who have been thus victimized."

The Treasury Department has called th attention of the postal authorities to the use of the mails for the purpose of defrauding people. It is said that a number of the claim agents interested have offices in this city.

The Poundmaster then repeated slowly as the order came over the 'phone: "A hog weighing about 150 pounds is running at large in the Ninth precinct. Northeast Washington. He is a large animal, somewhat wild, and is liable to do damage if not captured. Get a wagon and two men and go out there and take the animal in."

Mr. Einstein explained to a friend who was in his office at the time that the memory of the oldest inhabitant goes not back to the time when wild hogs ran at large in the District of Columbia. The Poundmaster intimated that he would not have been more surprised if he had received orders to go out and take in one of the elephants that might have wandered from the Zoo.

Asked if he thought the impounding of the hog would lead to the promulgation of an order by the Commissioners to muzzle all hogs hereafter running at large in the District, the Poundmaster smiled and replied: "You know Mr. Wight is now out of office."
